WOODROW WILSON'S EARLY DAYS.

Former Governor Robert Glenn of North Carolina is a boyhood playmate of President Wilson. They fished, hunted and played marbles and baseball together. Mr. Glenn relates these stories bearing upon the pluck and perseverance of the president:

"Woodrow Wilson and I were boys together. I am two years older than he. He was the son of a poor preacher. I was the son of a widowed mother, my father having died on the battlefield. Woodrow Wilson didn't have a dollar to spare. Neither did I have a dollar to spare. We had no silver spoons in our mouths when we came into the world. We had to make our own ways through college by doing menial work. There were several of us boys, all poor, and we formed a club among ourselves. We boarded together, hiring an old colored woman to cook for us. We paid her $4 and $5 a month and lived upon the most meager fare. We could not afford to pay the rate charged by even the most humble boarding house in the town. Woodrow Wilson knows what it is to be poor and work hard.

I was a pitcher on our baseball team in a game with a rival college. At a critical stage in the contest the opposing side had three men on bases with a crack hitter at bat. If they brought in those men we were lost. I purposely threw the ball outside the plate, but the batsman made a mighty jump and hit it a lick that seemed to send it up to kingdom come. The runners started for the home plate. Out in left field was a lean, spindle-shanked fellow. He started after that ball like a bullet. The chances were a hundred to one he would never make it. The ball went over a cut with the fielder half a second ahead of it. He had jumped the ditch, and, with a long arm outstretched, had nailed it. He got cheers that nearly raised the roof off the grandstand. That fielder was Woodrow Wilson."—Baltimore American.

WHO AM I?

The following is copied from a sign in Rock Island Arsenal:

I am more powerful than the combined armies of the world.

I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than the mightiest of siege guns.

I steal in the United States alone over $30,000,000 each year.

I spare no time, and find my victims among the rich and poor alike; the young and the old; the strong and the weak; widows and orphans know me.

I massacre thousands upon thousands of wage earners in a year.

I lurk in unseen places, and do most of my work silently. You are warned against me but you heed not.

I am relentless. I am everywhere; in the home, on the street, in the factory, at railroad crossings, and on the sea.

I bring sickness and degradation and death, and yet few seek to avoid me.

I destroy, crush and maim; I give nothing, but take all.

I am your worst enemy.

I am Carelessness.

Roger Q. Mills began his great speech against the electoral commission, that device which took the presidency away from Tilden and gave it to a mere claimant, by quoting the lines which begin, "I feel like one who treads alone some banquet hall deserted." Just suppose that he should return now and see "Cyclone" Davis in the place that he once filled, for Roger Q. Mills was at first a congressman-at-large from the State of Texas; would poetry suffice?—Waco Times-Herald.

As Cyclone's congressional career is so nearly closed, and as the said Cyclone has been so everlastingly and eternally squelched recently, the fiery Mills would perhaps remain quiet and let nature take its course. Proper respect should always be shown for the dead.

This is a solemn hour with the United States. An hour in which there should be no excitement, when calm judgment and reason should prevail. Every man's loyalty may be put to the supreme test, and the result of that test should be the support of our president by the whole nation as perfect and as complete as if it were the support of only one man.

A large part of Bryan and a large part of Brazos County are to be lifted out of the mud. Good streets and good roads are the best investments any people can make, and though they come high, when once in use and their great advantages, comfort and convenience have been demonstrated and experienced, those who now object, will be convinced and become the most ardent advocates of improved streets and highways.

The United States does not propose to wait all summer on Germany to accept the terms of the president's note which was the final word in regard to the submarine question. The note demands a modification of the methods employed by Germany and failure to agree to the demands within a few days will result in the severance of diplomatic relations. The severance of relations depends upon Germany's agreement to the demands, and does not depend upon further submarine outrages.

The news dispatches tell us that the United States sends a larger force into Mexico in the search for Villa, the Mexican people will regard it as an act of war. On the other hand, if we withdraw our troops the Villistas will say the Americans are retreating and harass the troops with night attacks and continuous sniping. It looks like we are in for it whichever way we turn.

Sen Jacinto Day, the day most sacred to all Texans, was properly observed throughout the State today. It was a general holiday in Bryan, the banks and court house being closed and schools dismissed. It is well that these great days should be fittingly observed, thereby keeping bright the fires of patriotism on the altar of liberty and transmitting this glorious heritage to our children.

That Mary Pickford matter running in some of the papers has a strong resemblance to Tennyson's Brook—there does not seem to be any end to it.

Russia has borne the brunt of the fighting on her own front, in Galicia, in Caucasus, in Mesopotamia, and now she is sending troops to France to fight shoulder to shoulder with the allies. In other words, Russia seems to have decided that if the fight is to be whipped it is up to her to do it, and she is getting busy.

August Jacobson Dead.

August Jacobson, Bryan's only Russian citizen, and who has been a familiar figure on the streets here for many years, died today at 3 o'clock at the Fountain Sanitarium after a long illness. A more extended sketch will be published later.

Salt is likely to go up, so much having been used with that latest Villa death story.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"Paw, which side is the heart on?" Every heart should be on the right side." "Then where's the liver?" "On the doctor's side."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Thou unassuming commonplace of Nature.—Wordsworth.

"What are your political sentiments?" "I don't know for sure," replied Senator Sorghum. "Out where I come from they don't let you have sentiment in politics."—Washington Star.

Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent.—Swift.

Young Actress—"Will you tell me one thing about your lovely newspaper work?" Interviewer—"Certainly. What do you want to know?" Young Actress—"Is it the make-up man who writes all the fiction tales?"—Baltimore American.

"Always speak the truth," said the man of precise standards. "Of course," replied Miss Cavendish; "but some people in their desire to do so think they're called upon to constitute themselves private detectives in order to find out all the truth there is."—Washington Star.

Girls, the automobile manufacturers are imitating your gay feet. No sooner did you blossom out in lily white, silver gray and brown shoes, knee-high and fascinating, than the manufacturers began painting their wheels in spring colors, so that now one can't tell whether it is a girl or an automobile that is coming.—Detroit Journal.

"You seem to be rather busy." "Yes. I'm writing a love letter. I've been working on it for more than an hour." "Why take such pains?" "I want to feel sure that if this letter is ever read in court it won't make me look like a fool."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Light cares speak, great ones are dumb.—Seneca.

She says her husband can't even keep her in pin money. "I know, but she buys diamond pins."—Judge.

LEONARD SCHOOL CLOSES.

The 1915-16 term of the Leonard School closed Wednesday with an all day picnic on the school grounds. A large crowd was present, including the parents of a number of the pupils, and everyone thoroughly enjoyed the day.

The teacher reports good work among her pupils during the session just closed. Miss Zonnie Seale was the teacher at the Leonard School last session.
